RICHMOND, VA., SATURDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 28, 1876.

THE CIRCULATION OF THE DISPATCH

IS LARGER THAN THE COMBINED CIRCUpyrotechnics were not employed last night to assemble the masses or to excite the enthusiasm of the people, but the respectable audience by which Colonel F. W. M. Holladay was greeted at Assembly Hall had been distinguished gentleman.

tendent of the City Conservative Committee. who, in appropriate remarks, announced the names of the following gentlemen who had been invited to preside: President, Hon. R. T. Daniel: Vice-Presidents, D. C. Richardson, Esq., Judge W. W. Crump, W. A. Maury, Esq., Hon. W. C. Carring-ton, Alois Rick, Esq., and Colonel R. B.

The President, on taking the chair, in brief address reviewed the important issues in a forcible manner, and closed by introducing our distinguished elector at large, Colonel F. W. M. Holladay.

sailing those who had been arrayed against us in battle; he did not come for the purpose of making a sectional speech, but to make a Union speech, and to arraign at the bar of his country the Radical party, by which all departments of our National Government had been corrupted. He then contrasted the pure and simple form of government as it formerly existed with the present corruption. He frequently read in the newspapers and upon posters "Tilden, Hendricks, and Reform," "Hayes, Wheeler, and Reform," and said if Hayes is better able to secure speakers returned to the city in time for late that reform which is necessary, then he

Mr. Watt filed a paper stating that and said that as we voted for their adoption in good faith we intended to abide by them. the last April term the Court required the He deplored the decadence of a personal parties to make up issues to be given to a interest in the affairs of the Government. We read at our breakfasts the orders of Taft and forgot them before dinner, but had such orders been issued before the war the whole people would have been aroused and the streets of Washington would probably have run red with blood. The speaker then paid a tribute to the memory of Andrew Johnson, radical as some regarded him, who, when in the Executive chair, refused to mount the tidal wave by which he might have attained still greater power, but remembering the constitutional principles taught by Jefferson and Madison, yielded to conscience and vetoed certain atrocious enactments of the party by which he had been placed in position. The issues of this controversy arise above mere dollars and cents. He fought not merely to secure honesty in tion permits about two thirds of the earth to the administration of Government, but to fall back in the furrow behind the plough, overthrow that party which has subverted "while the remainder, rising along the line and now seeks to destroy the Government of our fathers. Referring to Mr. Wheeler's letter of acceptance, wherein he says it was "unreasonable to expect the people of the South within the short space of ten years to be transformed into a condition like our model northern communities," he confessed he did not know what was meant, and said if Mr. Wheeler referred to the white people of the South, then the slander was simply atrocious, and he prayed to be saved from the civilization and teachings of the Radical party. There is nothing inherent in the Radical party by which it can be stopped in its course of corruption, for if it stop it dies. As Morton said, Hayes was what the party 2. The president of the meeting stated that ex-Governor Walker, who had appeared on the platform in the earlier part of the meeting, and for whom loud calls were made, had been called away to make preparations to fill an engagement in New York. Colonel R. B. Berkeley was then called for. He briefly responded, and in conclusion proposed three cheers for Colonel Holladay, which were given with a will. PERSONAL .- Rev. H. G. Crews, formerly of this city, has been assisting Rev. J. T. McLaughlin for the past ten days in a meeting at Musterfield and at Scottsburg, preaching twice in the day and once at night. The revival was one of great power, affecting a large circle. Crowds flocked to hear the preaching. Sixty have professed obedience to the faith, tle of Aguas Frescas, three leagues from Seville. The principal characters in the opera are the same as those that figure in lossini's celebrated "Barber of Seville." but the action takes place at a subsequent period. Though nine decades have passed since the first performance of the Marriage of Figaro at the Austrian capital, the opera is still as popular as it was on the day of its initial performance. The music is of a character that cannot pall on the taste, and for this reason Figaro must one of his operas could fail to charm a Rich- $4,292. mond audience. All of his compositions the productions of many composers who have achieved an ephemeral fame.

Figaro is a splendid illustration of the rounding each sentence so as to make every opera. It may be said really to be a musical poem.

The overture last night was well renderel. Mr. Bernard, however, was forced to leave the orchestra again in order to take part as Basilio. But the opera as a whole was very creditably presented, and seemed to give satisfaction.

Mr. Marson's Figaro was too stiff. He did not seem to be up in his part, and consequently could not render the lively byplays and spirited action incident to the character of the barber. He omitted in the very first act the solo-a little gem, by the way-beginning "Happy your lordship." His tones, however, were good, and with proper action he will make a good Figuro.

Mrs. Bernard, who personated Susanna. was as charming as ever. Indeed, she surpassed her former efforts, and, as usual, was the life of the opera. Her acting was capital, and her singing better than on any previous evening—and this is saying a good Mr. Benitz (Count Almavisa) was success ful during the evening until his solo with Mrs. Bernard, in the third act-"Unkind, why then Endeavor"-when he took one of his high notes a little flat.

the evening as Don Basilio, and seemed to be in the character that suited him. Miss Hattie Moore, the naughty Cherubim, sang her solo acceptably ("Thought Cannot Reach Thee ") in the second act. The rest of her performances were credit-

Mrs. Drayton, who acted the part of the Countess, surprised many persons, and although she hasn't a good voice, she added not a little to the interest of the opera. Miss Fanny Gonzales sang her part as Barbarina very well. Indeed, her solo in Police at once went to work, and ascerthe last act was excellent. The rest of the company did pretty well. In conclusion, we may say that a striking feature of the company is their excellent costumery. Mrs. Bernard's dresses are all of the most costly and elegant character, while the costumes of Miss Moore, Mr. Gates, and the rest are very handsome and tasteful. We have rarely seen a greater variety of attire in any opera company.

This afternoon Martha will be presented at the matinée, and to-night Maritana will be repeated.

READINGS AT THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRIS-TIAN ASSOCIATION LAST NIGHT .- The select readings by Professor J. Willoughby Reade, under the direction of the Lecture Committee, last night was a great success. The large hall of the Association was filled to overflowing by a very appreciative and discriminating audience. Although Professor Reade was to some extent a stranger to our community his inimitable entertainments have introduced him to our people as a popular reader of the finest talent, and the committee deserve commendation for the treat they have afforded the members in the engagement of Mr. Reade. The selections last night were all good, but we noticed with the greatest pleasure the rendition of Poe's Raven, which was given as, we venture to say, it was never before heard in this city. Possessing a full, rich voice, which is perfectly under control, and a cultured mind, he seems to catch the spirit of the author, and the characters stand forth as living beings before the audience. Especially is he at home in the humorous, and "Lord Dundreary in Love," rendered in costume, took the audience by storm, and caused uproarious mirth. "Punch in the Presence of the Passenjaire" was also recited with unsurpassed ability, and the audience were fairly convulsed with laughter. The entertainment wound up with several poems, recited in costume, which highly delighted the entire audience.

At the close of the readings he was requested by the Library Committee, at the suggestion of numerous members and friends of the Association, to give another reading on Monday night next for the purpose of purchasing books to replenish the library, which Professor Read agreed to do, with a change of programme. As all our people and the members are interested in this object they will doubtless respond to this call, and agree to pay their usual fee of admission on Monday night.

OWENS AT THE THEATRE NEXT WEEK .-The presence of the celebrated actor Mr. John E. Owens at the Theatre next week will add not a little to the amusement of the Fair-week. Tom Taylor's famous comedy The Victims" is an admirable production, and will be shown off to great advantage by Mr. Owens. In "Solon Shingle" he is too well known to need endorsation. The announcement of Colonel Holladay's name was the signal of the warmest applause. He commenced by saying that he had well-nigh finished the arduous labors with which he had been entrusted by the State Conservative Committee, and was nearly ready to make his report. He did not wish to be considered an alarmist, but he honestly believed that our liberties and the dearest rights of a free people were in peril. This suit was commenced in August, 1870, by Mr. George Watt, the well-known manufacturer, filing a bill in which he charged P. H. Starke with having infringed and used garded the whole country as a county, three of his patent rights, covering about twenty patent claims. This mould-board is a small piece, not much larger than a man's hand, but is acknowledged to be a valuable part of the plough. It is used for the purpose of cultivating corn or other crops, and in its opera-grass. In the operation this form of plough gives the crop a small quantity of earth, entirely covering the grass which grows around and between the plants. This form is also a sub-soil plough of the first magni-
